Ethnic Newswatch

Overview

Ethnic NewsWatch (ENW) features newspapers, magazines, and journals of the ethnic and minority press, providing researchers access to essential, often overlooked perspectives. With titles dating from 1990, ENW presents a comprehensive, full-text collection of more than 250 publications offering both national and regional coverage. While the content may mirror mainstream media coverage, the viewpoints are decidedly unique. Of the more than one million articles contained in the collection, nearly a quarter of them are presented in Spanish, making ENW an unmatched bilingual diversity database. The voices of the Asian-American, Jewish, African-American, Native-American, Arab-American, Eastern-European, and multi-ethnic communities can be heard as well. A majority of the content in ENW is exclusive and not available in any other online database. With an ever-growing, unequaled collection of articles, editorials, columns, and reviews from different and unique perspectives, ENW is an essential interdisciplinary resource for researchers.
