

The Christian Science Monitor

Coverage: 1908-1996

Start here to discover the human element behind global events.

After being provoked by Joseph Pulitzer's New York World newspaper for her unconventional religious ideas, 87-year-old Mary Baker Eddy founded The Christian Science Monitor. In contrast to the yellow journalism of the day, this newspaper's directive was to "injure no man, but to bless all mankind." Over the decades, her newspaper has earned many awards for journalistic excellence—including, ironically, several "Pulitzer" Prizes.

With the exception of publishing one religious article each day at the request of the pioneering Mrs. Eddy, The Christian Science Monitor provides secular, balanced coverage of international news and events, as a public service. For more than 100 years, its staff writers and correspondents around the world have reported on wars, scientific discoveries, human rights abuses, political campaigns, the arts, the environment, and people trying to make a positive difference.

To look squarely in the face of the world's problems, progress, and achievements over the last century ... start here.

Illuminate history. Preserve the past.

ProQuest is proud to help you illuminate history for your users while preserving this historic newspaper for future generations. The Christian Science Monitor, like all digitized titles within the ProQuest Historical Newspapers™ program, lets researchers:

- Browse complete issues, cover to cover.
- Study the progression of issues over time with ProQuest's complete runs of historical newspapers.
- Cross-search topics and compare coverage and perspectives across all ProQuest Historical Newspapers, such as The New York Times with Index, The Guardian, and the Los Angeles Times, for broader, often contrasting views of issues and events.

- Search for information by keyword, more than 20 article types (front page, editorial cartoon, classified ad, etc.), dates and date ranges, author, and more.
- View not only news articles, but also photos, advertisements, marriage announcements, obituaries, cartoons, and more, for added context.
- Print, download, and share articles and images in PDF format.

ProQuest[®]
Start here.

Focus on research instead of the mechanics of finding data.

ProQuest makes it easy for both novice researchers and information professionals to find relevant information quickly, with basic and advanced search options. Searches can be confined to 20 specific article types and dates to focus on the most relevant information. Each newspaper page is zoned into article images, and each newspaper image is supported with searchable ASCII text. Combined, these features mean faster, more effective searches for users. ProQuest digitizes documents at a high resolution to deliver clean, readable images, and highlighted search terms focus readers on the most relevant content.

Researchers can sort their results by oldest, most recent, or most relevant. In addition, articles that originally spanned multiple pages of a newspaper are “threaded” together, appearing as one continuous image and improving readability. Users can view and easily download articles, front pages, photos, display ads, and more in PDF format. The “My Research” summary feature can be used to track recent searches, save articles, email documents, create a bibliography, export citations, and create Web pages.

Your single source for centuries of continuous historical news coverage.
